Seward Memorial Library recently hosted a one-hour program led by Evonne Agnello. During the “Writing Your Family Stories” presentation Evonne provided some valuable suggestions from other established writers as well as personal insights into her writing process. While giving her writing testimony she also shared a part of her life. The group was engaged and felt connected at two levels: as potential writers/authors as well as humans with intimate family stories. Participants were not quick to leave, but lingered for some personal comments, which commends the quality of this event.
